1. Held every year on 21 May, UNESCO leads the celebration of World Day for Cultural Diversity for Dialogue and Development highlighting not only the richness of the world's cultures, but also the essential role of intercultural dialogue for achieving peace and sustainable development.
2. A recent international emergency has proved the intrinsic value of the cultural and creative sector at generating social cohesion, educational resource or personal well-being in times of crisis. It has also underscored the sector's potential to generate economic growth, something which is too often underestimated.
3. With the adoption in September 2015 of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development by the United Nations, and the resolution on Culture and Sustainable Development adopted by the UN General Assembly in December 2015, the message of the World Day for Cultural Diversity for Dialogue and Development is more important than ever. The 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) can best be achieved by drawing upon the creative potential of the world's diverse cultures and engaging in continuous dialogue to ensure that all members of society benefit from sustainable development.

Cultural diversity is a driving force of development, not only with respect to economic growth, but also as a means of leading a more fulfilling intellectual, emotional, moral and spiritual life. Cultural diversity is thus an asset that is indispensable for poverty reduction and the achievement of sustainable development.

"Scouts and Guides Around the World."

1. Many young people aged between 6 and 25 belong to the Scout movement. It is a worldwide organization, which was set up to help young people achieve their full potential as they grow up.
2. The organization was established in 1907 by a British general called Robert Baden-Powell. While in the army, he wrote a publication about scouting (which means searching and keeping watch) and how to survive in the wild, called 'Aids to Scouting'. He realized how popular this was, and the result was another book, 'Scouting for Boys', which had less emphasis on the military. To test his ideas, he held a week-long camp for 21 boys from various schools in London, Poole and Bournemouth. This took place in August 1907, on Brownsea Island, in Southern England. These boys had the chance to enjoy outdoors, which became another of the movement's objectives.
3. The Scout Movement quickly got established in Europe. It then spread throughout the world, starting in Chile in 1909. To begin with, the focus was on boys aged 11 to 18 . However, as the movement grew, it was clear that younger boys, older boys and girls all wanted to be involved. Baden-Powell's sister set up the Girl Guides in 1910, and in 1914 she started Rosebuds, later renamed Brownies, for younger girls. The movement's intention to help young people play useful roles in society applies equally to girls and boys. By 2010, there were 32 million scouts, and by 2006 , there were 10 million guides around the world, from a total of 216 different countries.
4. 2007 marked 100 years of the Scout Movement, and events took place around the world to celebrate this centenary. To mark the occasion, a colourful badge was produced for scouts to sew onto their uniforms or bags. The design included the official scout emblem, as well as the phrase, 'one world one promise', and images of doves and the globe.
5. 2007 was also the 150th anniversary of Baden-Powell's birth. To honour both occasions, a flame was lit at Baden-Powell's grave in Nyeri. This is the place in Kenya where he spent the last few years of his life. The flame was then carried through several countries until it reached the UK.

Subject: Alarming rise in population

Dear Editor,

As an aware citizen, I am writing to express my concern about the alarming rise in India's population. This rapid growth puts immense pressure on our nation's development.

With a growing population, unemployment soars, leaving many struggling to make ends meet. Essential resources like water and electricity become strained, leading to shortages and unequal distribution. Cities are becoming overcrowded, straining infrastructure leading to a decline in living standards.

Furthermore, this population boom exacerbates poverty. Limited resources are stretched thin, hindering opportunities for all. The environment also suffers, as increased waste generation and pollution take their toll.

Urgent measures are needed to address this issue. Family planning initiatives and public awareness campaigns are crucial.

Investing in education, particularly for girls, can also have a long-term impact.

I urge policymakers to prioritize population control strategies for a sustainable and prosperous future for India.

Sincerely,

5. The graph presents a comparison of the consumption of health supplements by men and women between the ages of 25 and 35 from 2018 to 2022. It demonstrates an increase in annual sales for both genders. Men made 20 lakhs in sales in 2018 while women made 10 lakhs. However, in 2022, women had sales of 37 lakhs, compared to 40 lakhs for men. It's interesting to see how steadily female sales increased.

The rising importance of health and wellness can be attributed to the upward trend in annual sales of health supplements among both genders. It is evident that both genders comparably care about their health and are willing to spend money on supplements to improve their health. The sales data also demonstrates that women are growing more conscious of and proactive about managing their health. The general pattern of health supplement sales suggests that the wellness and health industry will continue to grow.

The linear graph illustrates the number of boys and girls who participated in different types of sports in a school.

The data given in the graph shows that football is least preferable with both boys and girls as only 20 girls and 30 boys have participated in football. Although there are 10 boys more in comparison to girls but it has the least male participants in comparison to other sports. Badminton is the most popular sport with boys and the second most popular is cricket. Boys participated more than girls in badminton with around 60 compared to 55 girls. Girls also preferred basketball, equal to badminton with participation levels of over 55 as opposed to boys who numbered around 45. There is a huge difference in Kho-Kho in which around 60 girls participated which has the highest number of girl participants in comparison to other sports. On the contrary only 40 boys participated in Kho-Kho.

Subsequently, the figures demonstrate that boys preferred playing badminton even more than the girls and spent slightly more time in playing cricket and then basketball.

However, girls preferred Kho-Kho the most, equally interested in playing basketball and badminton, the least they preferred is cricket but also did not participate significantly in football.

(i) When Ebright was in the seventh grade, he attended a county science fair but he could not win any prizes because the other participants had shown real experiments. When he was in the eighth grade he tried to find the cause of the disease that used to kill nearly all the Monarch butterflies. His trial of this experiment won him a prize. In the second year of his high school, Ebright began to search an unknown hormone in the gold spots of the Monarch pupae. Ebright and another excellent science student first had to build a device that showed that the spots were producing a hormone necessary for the butterfly's full development. This project won Ebright first place in the county fair and entry into the International Science and Engineering Fair. There he won third place for zoology. He also got a chance to work during the summer at the entomology laboratory of the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research. In his senior year, he proved that the cells of a monarch would develop into a normal butterfly wing only if they were fed the hormone from the gold spots. As a result, he could spend some time at the laboratory of the Department of Agriculture. There he could identify the chemical structure of that hormone. While studying the x-ray photographs of the hormone, he found yet another important aspect about it. He discovered how the cell could read the blueprint of its DNA.

(ii) Dear Diary,

Today, I find myself reflecting deeply on the events that have shaped my life and the values that have transformed me. It all began with my encounter with Anil, a man whose kindness and trust changed the course of my existence.

When I first met Anil, I was a thief, skilled in the art of deception and theft. My life revolved around stealing to survive. But Anil saw something in me that I had long forgotten – the potential for goodness. He took me in, not as a servant, but as a friend. He taught me to read and write, and more importantly, he showed me the value of trust and honesty.

One night, I found myself with the perfect opportunity to steal from him. I had the money in my hands, and I could have easily disappeared into the night. But as I stood there, something inside me changed. I realized that the money I held was not just currency; it was a symbol of the trust Anil had placed in me. The thought of betraying that trust filled me with guilt.

I returned the money and decided to stay. It was a small act, but it marked the beginning of my transformation. Anil never mentioned the incident, but his silent understanding spoke volumes. It was then that I understood the true essence of human values and relationships. Trust, kindness, and the willingness to see the good in others can transform even the most hardened hearts.

Today, I strive to live by these values. I am no longer the thief I once was. Anil's faith in me gave me the strength to change, and for that, I am eternally grateful. Life is not just about survival; it's about building meaningful relationships and living with integrity.
